NEW CULTURAL STUDIES: THE LIQUID THEORY READER

Gary Hall and Clare Birchall

Culture Machine Liquid Books is a series of experimental digital 'books' published under the conditions of both open editing and free content. As such, readers are free to annotate, tag, edit, add to, remix, reformat, reversion, reinvent and reuse any of the books in the series - and, what's more, they are encouraged to do so.

The most interesting results of such open editing and writing - as chosen by Culture Machine's editors and peer-reviewers - will be 'frozen' and published on the main Culture Machine site as new versions of volumes in the Liquid Books series in their own right.

The first volume in the Culture Machine Liquid Books series is New Cultural Studies: The Liquid Theory Reader. This has been edited by Gary Hall and Clare Birchall as a follow up to their 2006 woodware volume, New Cultural Studies: Adventures in Theory (Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press). The first 'frozen liquid' version of this book - New Cultural Studies: The Liquid Theory Reader (Version 1.0) - is appearing as part of the Culture Machine journal's 'Pirate Philosophy' issue in 2009. To access it, please click on the screen below:

